Total Learning Centers offers Solutions and Support for Homeschoolers

Wexford, Pa. – Parents who homeschool their children often find themselves facing obstacles. They need to provide instruction in a myriad of subjects, all of which become increasingly difficult as the child matures, while also meeting social needs. In addition, the paperwork required by the state is intensive and can be overwhelming. As a result, parents often experience feelings of isolation, stress and doubt. These frustrations are compounded if the child struggles with attention problems, has learning disabilities or other special needs. Total Learning Centers can help parents overcome these obstacles, with alternative and supplemental curriculum, tutoring in tough subjects, assistance with paperwork and individualized programs for students with special learning needs.

Many parents choose to homeschool because they can offer individual attention and focus on the specific needs of each child. Total Learning Centers shares this philosophy by providing individual instruction, flexible hours, easy-to-access facilities and full testing if needed. As one parent said, “My child’s needs outgrew my ability to satisfy his academic requirements in enough areas that I knew I needed help. I have come to put my full trust in the professionals at TLC.”

Parents are encouraged to attend Solutions and Support for Homeschoolers on Oct. 19 from 1:00-3:00pm at 12045 Perry Highway, Wexford, Pa. 15090. For directions or more information, please call 724-940-1090 to speak to one of our education consultants.
